

RAID HALTS GIRLS IN SEVEN VEILS DANCE

Eight Men and a Woman Arrested on Charge of Giving Immoral Show.

EVEN DETECTIVES BLUSH

Cop Posing as Merchant 'Out for a Time' Nets Promoter Arrested in Lynbrook.

Eight men and a woman were arrested shortly before last midnight by Inspector William Boettler and a squad of detectives in a raid on Durand's restaurant, 106 West Forty-third street, and locked in the West Forty-seventh street station charged with conducting an indecent and immoral show. Among the prisoners was George Durand, proprietor of the restaurant.

The party was held in a room on the second floor of the restaurant. The woman charged with promoting the show is Miss Lillian Bradley, 30 years old, who describes herself as a booking agent, of 203 West Ninety-eighth street. Miss Bradley was arrested on May 27 for conducting a similar show for the Meadowbrook Hook and Ladder Club near Lynbrook, L. I.

Three girls said to have been employed by Miss Bradley to do the "dance of the seven veils" were putting on the veils when the party was broken up. Up to that time, the police said, the entertainment had consisted of an immoral motion picture and some stories of such a nature that even the detectives present hid their faces in shame.

Names Given by Prisoners.

At the station the prisoners gave their names as Bert Grant, aged 41, song writer, 225 West 113th street, Harlem; Weiner, 27, 1452 Wilkins avenue, the Bronx; Lester Rohe, 24, piano player, 31 West Seventy-first street; Joseph Hartman, 51, an actor, 506 East 144th street; John Gattano, 49, a waiter, 132 West Forty-ninth street; Gardes Gaston, 39, waiter, 207 West Tenth street; and George Englebert, 39, waiter, 20 West Fortieth street. Miss Bradley said her "booking office" was at Broadway and Forty-sixth street.

Durand is charged with permitting the show to be held and with aiding it. The waiters are charged with selling liquor. Grant and Weiner, it is alleged, furnished an operated the two reel moving picture. Rohe was described as an assistant of Miss Bradley in putting on the "dance of the seven veils," and Hartman is charged with telling the stories.

Detective Harvey said he went to Miss Bradley a few days ago, posing as a silk merchant of Patchogue, L. I., and said he wanted to put on a little party with some friends.

Says She Had Cops Fixed.

"New York is the place for your show," she told him. "And don't you worry about it. The cops are fixed all right. I've run this sort of thing before enough times to know how it should be done."

Accordingly the detectives sat through forty-five minutes of lewd pictures when they had finished a $5 dinner. Grant and Weiner, who operated the machine, then folded up their apparatus and went downstairs, where two detectives grabbed them and took them to the station in a taxi. But the chauffeur returned and tipped off Durand. The proprietor rushed into the room and shouted:

"It's all off. The place is pinched." Everybody was arrested except three girls who were preparing for the dance. They were allowed to dress and placed in taxis, with instructions to go home.
